

There's Still Room.

"We'll make room."

I had come to a banquet by myself. I knew people there, but I had come alone. There were six carefully spaced chairs at each round table. As I passed a table, filled with three couples, one man was already up and grabbing a nearby chair from another table, the rest were squishing the other chairs closer together, and someone said, "Join us. We'll make room."

What a wonderful greeting "We'll make room" is.

Inherent in that greeting is the attitude "There's still room." It's all in the attitude isn't it? I passed other tables "filled" with six people before I arrived at the one that still had room, despite being just as full.

The Mission New Mexico State Missions Offering is one of the ways we make a statement about how New Mexico Baptists view the Kingdom of God. We are a "We'll make room" people. We are a "There's still room" people.

"There's still room." So, we'll reach out to the entirety of the mosaic of the peoples that call themselves New Mexicans. We'll provide evangelistic and discipleship opportunities in camp settings. We'll reach out to the over 58,000 college and university students making critical life decisions. We'll cooperatively provide for people and families that are hungry and introduce them to the Bread of Life.

Thank you for giving generously to the Mission New Mexico State Missions Offering so that all across this great state men, women, boys and girls can know that there's still room for them.
